A World Apart Peter McAra

A sweeping Australian historical saga that crosses oceans to prove love conquers all...

April, 1820. As children, they shared a schoolroom, but no education can remove the stain of being peasant-born. So when Eliza Downing begins to blossom into womanhood and the future Viscount de Havilland notices, his family steps in to intervene.

Once full of possibilities, Eliza's life spirals into shame and degradation, culminating finally in a false conviction and transport to Botany Bay. Through shipwreck, exile, secrets, and scandals, Eliza holds fast to the belief that Harry will come for her — but he doesn't come soon enough, and Eliza must learn to recognise her own value and become the heroine of her own story. Praise for A WORLD APART:

'A World Apart is a lovely story depicting the resilience of love no matter the obstacles.' — Penny Dreadful

'The story reminded me of one of those old-fashioned historicals that read like a fairy tale in a way where the hero and heroine are allowed to fall in love in spite of their class differences and then all the powers that be are there to thwart them.' — Delighted Reader
