The Suitcases of San León (A Short Story) Jane Hawley

This story was originally published in Day One, a weekly literary journal dedicated to short fiction and poetry from emerging writers.

Near midnight, an empty bus pulls into the town of San León. As the depot workers clean the bus, they find evidence of the passengers' presence—the urine-soaked seats, the human remains, the luggage that, along with the passengers themselves, will never make it to their final destinations. Though the driver offers no explanation, the workers understand that the disappearance of the travelers is linked to the drug-cartel war that's happening in and around the town. Now the men, tasked with disposing of the suitcases, are faced with a terrible decision: Should they protect themselves through silence or speak up and risk their own lives and the lives of their loved ones? Haunting and honest, The Suitcases of San León is a story of doomed choices and complicity in a time of unpredictability and violence.
