Laxatives: A Practical Guide Francesco Capasso, Timothy S. Gagarella

Constipation is a common disorder that is often defined differently by patients and physicians. Clinically, constipation occurs when bowel movements are difficult or painful. The "normality" of bowel movements, in terms of frequency, varies among individuals; frequency that is thought by one person to be constipation may be reported by another to be usual and thus normal. Often the perceived "need" to have a bowel movement leads to self-treatment with laxatives as these drugs are widely available without a prescription. This situation can raise problems in patient care, because of potential interactions between laxatives and other medications. Furthermore, chronic use (abuse) of laxatives can cause serious medical consequences, causing patients to visit physicians, and even to be hospitalized for further evaluation and care. This has a financial impact on the patient, and on health care systems. It is essential that pharmacists, physicians and other health care practitioners counsel patients on the causes of constipation and the proper use of laxatives. A medical work-up by a physician should be done to determine if the constipation is due to a pathological process. Often normal bowel function (for an individual) can be maintained by diet and/or lifestyle. Most laxatives in use today are of botanical origin. Further research on the mechanism of action of these and synthetic laxatives is needed to better define their pharmacology and toxicology.
